Logotype specimen v2 — slim, lowercase, four brands

Five candidates, each rendering all four publisher brands in their own brand color: ağustos, pataraz, pld türkiye, photometric batch. Hero + small (header lockup) sizes. All wordmarks lowercase. Decide by eye.

Test glyphs: ğ in ağustos, ü in türkiye, plus how the font handles a short word (pataraz) vs. a long compound (photometric batch). The long names are stress tests for letter-spacing and rhythm.

Fraunces — light + WONK axis

Phaedra Charles & Flavia Zimbardi (Undercase Type) · SIL OFL — already self-hosted in your project
Variable: weight 300 + opsz 60 + WONK 1 + SOFT 50 → totally different beast from semi-bold

 photometric batch PHOTOMETRIC BATCH

Verdict: What you already have, dialed slim and weird. WONK=1 swaps in alternate letterforms (g, y, ear of a). If this works, zero new font load — just retune.

Cormorant Garamond — Light

Christian Thalmann (Catharsis Fonts) · SIL OFL — free, self-hostable
Five weights (300–700), italic. Static (no variable axes).

 photometric batch PHOTOMETRIC BATCH

Verdict: Quintessential slim editorial serif. Garamond's classical proportions, drawn for screen. Whisper-thin, very confident, ages forever. The ğ is delicate but reads.

Instrument Serif — Italic

Instrument (design studio) · SIL OFL — free, self-hostable
Two styles: Regular & Italic. Italic shown here.

Verdict: The italic of a font designed for brand marks. Slim, distinctive, energetic — the wordmark feels like it's leaning into the work. Strong personality, hard to forget.

Mid-century European feel, clean, confident. The sans option that doesn't feel generic.

Verdict: High-contrast magazine serif. Hairline thin verticals, dramatic strokes. 'Vogue cover' energy.
Distinctive yes — but might feel formal next to a folk emblem.
